Beck Fails To Mention 'Own Story' Plan

He made no mention of his plan to use one million dollars in union funds to tell his own story of financial transactions uncovered by the Senate rackets investiga. There are reports that the un-Israeli Premier ion's executive board has turned thumbs down on this idea.

Red Officials Find Freedom Subversive

Citizens of the U.S. have noticed on some of the letters they get a postmark which reads: "Support Your Crusade for Freedom." None of them became excited as a result. But it got the Russians excited. Their puppet government in Hungary refuses to deliver mail from the U.S. bearing this postmark.

Its words, says Budapest, constitute a gross provocation to murder and bloodshed; hence they violate Sec. 2, Art. 1 of the International Postal Convention, which says that the purpose of the Postal Union is to "promote in that" (the postal) sphere the development of international cooperation.'

The Communists know what they are doing, all right. The word "freedom" is subversive. Tyrants throughout history have frowned upon its use. But even more innocent vords, with no such historical taint of subversion, have become suspect in Communist Hungary. Budapest also objects to a do-it-yourself slogan used in all innocence to urge Canadians to do a little cleaning and painting. It reads: "Why wait for spring? Do it now.'

The use of this postmark on letters to Hungary, says Budapest, shows that Canada would "welcome new counter-revolutionary activity and bloodshed in Hungary!'

Budapest may be right, though, in concluding that even this postmark is dangerous. Words, any words, are dangerous to a bad government. Any contact with people who are free can have subversive effects. Tyranny always needs an

American Communist Party

There is a tendency to accept the American Communist Party as a reformed body that purged itself of its indecencies at the 16th National Convention in February. Actually that convention confirmed the Moscow control of the party which remains an arm of the Kremlin as it has been all the years of

J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the FBI, has summarized the results of the 16th National Convention of the American Communist Party as follows:

"1. Despite a year of debate, the party retained its old name and traditional organization.

"2. The party continued the majority of its old leadership. "3. The party reaffirmed its adherence to the basic concepts of Marxism-Leninism. "4. The party reaffirmed its acceptance of 'prole-

"5. The party refused to take a stand against the Soviet rape of Hungary.

"6. The party refused to take a stand against the tyranny and anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union. "7. The party at no time passed any resolution during the convention declaring its independence of the Soviet Union, nor did it urge freedom in the satellites, nor did it support American foreign policy to the detriment of Soviet foreign policy; and at no time did it disavow its dependence upon the Soviet Union or its loyalty to the Soviet Union. In fact, upon its conclusion, the Soviet-controlled press hailed the Communist Party, USA, for remaining loyal 'to the principles of Marxism-Leninism.'

"8. The party reaffirmed its adherence to the basic Leninist concept of democratic centralism, even more than in prior conventions, through the selection of convention delegates who were primarily functionaries, and who ended the convention agreeing that 'the party won' and that there was 'unity.' "

Although the American party is small in membership, it remains a disciplined body which now has the advantage of a certain acceptance hitherto withheld from it. During the past few weeks, Communist functionaries have found platforms in American universities and among learned societies which had, during the past few years, avoided association with Kremlin agents. The general atmosphere seems to be favorable to united front activity such a was usual in the 1930s. The policy of the Kremlin is to develop united front organizations in all countries as an offset to the trend toward the re-emergence of anti-Kremlin Socialist parties. It is perhaps significant that the Committee of the Senate which is devoting itself to discovering corruption in labor unions used to be the McCarthy Committee which devoted itself to the uncovering of Communists in government.

The real object of the united front movement in the United States is to get around such legislation as the Smith Act by creating the impression that the American Communist Party is really a social and educational organization rather than an espionage arm of an alien government. The party had gone underground after the McCarthy investigations and had to create a mechanism for re-emerging into the open. The united front is such a mechanism, for it makes it possible for the party to use non-Communists as an umbrella for active party members. It is easier to recruit new members through united front organizations than to attempt to bring them directly into the party without the testing involved in an intermediary

But most of all the united front is useful because it gives an aura of respectability to Communist operatives. It is often possible to find dupes who lend their names to head Communist operations because they agree with the announced purposes of particular committees or organizations; when they are discovered to be dupes, they are usually indignant that others do not take them at their own valuation. The dupes have served the Communists often more ably than some party

Anti-Communists are aware of the need for eternal vigilance, but the hope of the Communists is that a general antipathy to an enforced conformity to any pattern will work in their favor. Further, they feel that no Congressional committee will ever be as relentless as Senator McCarthy was because such conduct does not pay off politically. The fact is that currently most efforts at investigating Communism hardly attract notice. They are taking a chance that the cry against McCarthyism will work in their favor, as it actually is working at the present time.

Speaker Rayburn Urges President Not To 'Abdicate' His Authority

WASHINGTON-President Eisenhower's sudden summons of Congressional leaders to discuss plans for a substitute President in case of Presidential disability came as a surprise to most of the country. It did not come as a surprise to many inside the Administration.

They have been concerned for some time over the nervousness of the President, his persistent, hacking cough, his tendency not to concentrate for any length of time on difficult problems, and his habit of dressing-down his assistants as if they were buck privates. He has a continuing desire to get away from Washington, did not want to return from Thomasville, Ga., to launch the Mid-East Doctrine, and will now leave shortly for Augusta,

Meanwhile, there are difficult decisions which, under the American system of government, only the President can make.

As a result, friends of the President have been discussing a bill which would permit the President to become a sort of President Emeritus, go into semi-retirement, with full duties of decision taken over by Vice President Nixon.

This is an extremely touchy subject, because it bears out some of the statements made, and denied, about the President's health during the election campaign. Because of this, and because the plan was likely to arouse opposition in Congress, it was finally discarded. Instead, it was suggested that a Constitutional amendment be passed whereby either the President could declare himself unfit, or the Cabinet could rule him unfit. The Vice President would then take over.

"Don't Abdicate"

Summoned to the White House, Congressional leaders took the precaution to study the Constitution in advance. Speaker Sam Rayburn read it at breakfast before he went to the White House. Congressman Mannie Celler of Brooklyn took a copy to the White House and held it in his lap during the closed door session with Ike.

In the end, they "threw the book" - the Constitution - at the President.

Eisenhower opened the meeting in serious but friendly vein. "I have asked you gentlemen down here on a matter of deep concern to me," he said, "something to which I have been giving a great deal of thought."

After explaining further his plan for relieving the President in case of disability, Eisenhower said: "I am not a lawyer and do not know much about these things, but I would like you to listen to Attorney General Brown-

Brownell then read the proposed Constitutional amendment, together with a letter which Ike proposed sending to Congress asking for its passage.

The reaction of Congressional leaders was immediate.

"Mr. President," snapped Speaker Sam Rayburn who has had more Congressional experience than any other man in America, "if you send that letter, the American people will never understand it. They elected you, not Nixon. They elected you by one of the greatest majorities in history. They do not expect you to abdicate.'

The President had said that this would not apply to him because a Constitutional amendment could not be passed before he was out of office. But Congressional leaders did not appear to believe this.

Duty Of Congress

Strongest cpposition, in addition to Rayburn's, came from Senator Knowland, the Republican leader, Rep. John McCormack of Boston, the Democratic leader, and Rep. Celler.

Section I of the Constitution, which, he said, gives Congress the right to rule on the conditions of removing the President and the right to select a successor. either until an election is held or the disability of the President is removed.

"There it is in black and white," said Celler. "What's wrong with it? Why change it?"

"We are talking as if this was a new idea," replied Eisenhower, beginning to be nettled at the chilly response. "It has come up before on several occasions."

He then recalled that after President Garfield was shot and lay near death for several months we were without a President and many people thought that Chester Arthur should have assumed office.

"The same thing came up during Woodrow Wilson's term." agreed Celler. "Wilson was ill and there was a move to replace him, though the situation was aggravated by Wilson's support of the League of Nations. The Cabinet knew his true condition at the time, but it was withheld from the public. The Cabinet couldn't be trusted.

"The trouble with your proposal is that the Cabinet would have to certify the President's disability and the Cabinet is under fealty to the President."

"I have studied this for many years," said the New York Congressman. "I have made it my business to find out what the leading authorities think. Within the past two years I have conducted a survey among the law deans of fifty leading universities.'

"Their opinion was that Congress has the power to deal with this situation without a Constitutional amendment. Only one professor out of fifty disagreed."

"I hope the whole question will be explored," suggested Rep. McCormack. "I am sure, Mr. President, that we must keep in mind that the founding fathers wisely considered the possibility of dictatorship by unelected officials in government. There is no danger of it in our day, but we must certainly exercise the same foresight of the founding fathers.'

The President finally suggested that if they didn't like his ideas, maybe a Presidential disability commission should be appointed to explore the entire question. Senator Knowland, who took an extremely dim view of the original proposal, seemed to like this idea.

Dulles Biography May Stir Tempest Abroad mirer, former Presidential ad-WASHINGTON By Stewart Alsop

It is not the usual function of a political reporter to review books, but occasionally a book comes along which is also important news. Such a book is "John Foster Dulles: A Biography," by John Robinson Beal of "Time"

The book is news for two reasons. First it contains a fascinating account of what had previously been only rumored or suspected - a calculated decision by Secretary Dulles to force a showdown in the Middle East. The account of this startling episode is undoubtedly based on interviews with Dulles himself. Second, the book will no doubt have important international repercussions, since it not only opens all the old half-healed wounds caused by the Suez crisis, but also pours great dollops

The Beal book is thus likely to cause as much uproar as the account based on interview with Dulles of the Dulles "brink of war" theory, by another "Time" man, James Shepley.

In his introduction Beal, while formally absolving Dulles of responsibility for the book, states that "it benefits from personal interviews with him which provided insight into his official actions, for which I thank him."

Repeatedly Beal describes Dulles' views with an authority which could only have come from such "personal interviews." The book will certainly be regarded, therefore, as a kind of personal Dulles White Paper on his Middle East policies, unofficial but

Beal confidently describes the manner of Dulles' withdrawal of he American offer of aid to Egypt in building the Aswan Dam as a calculated slap in the face for Egypt's President Nasser, consciously designed to bring on issue involved more than simply a showdown. The Beal account should be read in full, since it is an authoritative report of one of

For Dulles, a moment of coldwar climax had come. It was necessary to call Russia's hand in the game of economic competition. It was necessary to make the demonstration on a grand scale. denying Nasser money for a dam, a polite and concealed rebuff would fail to make the really important point. "It had to be forthright, carrying its own built-in moral for neutrals in a way that the ormolu of applied propaganda would not cheapen."

In short, Dulles withdrew the American offer as insultingly as possible, not in a moment of temporary aberration, as many thought at the time, but because he planned it that way.

Beal's version of the Dulles decision to force a showdown parallels almost word for word the version of the decision previously offered by still another "Time-Life" man and Dulles ad-

However, despite this vast number of career women engaged in business in this country, there are only 860 females holding important executive positions. Why is this? Do women lack the intelligence and other characteristics required to make good executives? Or is it because so many people of both sexes do not care to work for a woman executive? Or is it a matter of discrimination?

The next time you have steak for dinner you take 75 per cent of said steak and give your wife 25 per cent. There is no reason for her to eat more than she needs. Besides if she cuts down on her eating a little it will help her appearance in a bathing suit. Or to be able to feature an hour glass figure style.

Superintendent Cites Need For Ministers

Area Methodists Meet At Romney

ROMNEY, W. Va. - The growing need for ministers in the West Virginia Methodist Conference was emphasized by Rev. Dr. Vernon C. Cutright, district superintendent, who presided at the all-day Moorefield District Conference at the church here.

Dr. Cutright said a shortage, which already exists, will be accentuated soon when other older clergymen retire.

James W. Grubb of Keyser, first-year student at Potomac State College, was installed as a local preacher by Dr. Cutright. His wife stood at the chancel with him along with Rev. S. A. F. Wagner, pastor of Grace Church, Keyser, to which Mr. Grubb belongs.

Reports were given by Dr. Henry R. High of Charleston, Rev. Wagner of Keyser, Rev. Allen Parrish of Burlington, Rev. A. L. Harmon of Fort Ashby, Rev. Frank Johnson of Gormania, Rev. William J. Trowbridge of Davis, Rev. A. Coleman Brown, superintendent of the Methodist Orphange at Burlington; Dr. James Ling, vice-president of West Virginia Wesleyan College.

Others who submitted reports included Rev. A. P. Wallace, executive director of the Conference Board of Education: Mrs. Sumbers Sawyer of Terra Alta, John Bowyer, youth director; Miss Helen Stealey, children's direclor; Sterling Evans, Charleston, conference lay leader, and John E. Grindle, district lay leader.

Bishop Lloyd C. Wicke, resident bishop of the Pittsburgh area, was principal speaker at the laymen's rally Monday evening.

Among those attending from Trinity Church, Piedmont, were Rev. and Mrs. L. E. Crowson, Mrs. John E. Grindle, Fred War-Whitefield, Marion Reeves, C. E. Hickerson, James Grove, Kenneth Sheetz, Mr. and Mrs. Quinton Paugh and George W. Daddys-

Gutshall Gets 41; Rockets Beaten By V.F.W., 83-74

Fort Ashby's power-packed V. F. W. quint defeated the Keyser Potomac State College players, 83-74, and Johnson's Grocery edged the Parsons (W. Va.) Independents by the score of 64-62 in quarter-final round contests in the Central YMCA-Jaycees basketball tournament last night on the "Y" court.
